

SUN'S ECLIPSE VISIBLE IN D. C. FOR ONE HOUR

Naval Observatory Gets Data in Many Cities in U. S.

There doesn't seem to be much connection between the eclipse of the sun and the German submarine.

But—
There is. The data obtained during the two-hour eclipse of the sun by the moon last night at the Naval Observatory was taken with a view to establishing more perfectly the positions of the sun and the moon in their relation to the earth. As these positions are more clearly perceived, the science of astronomy and its effect on the problems of navigation become more exact.

Navigation is subject to human frailties, and anything that will cause a ship to steer a straighter course, to be able to move freely, knowing thoroughly her position on the sea, will enable her more readily to dodge a submarine.

Astronomer J. S. Hammond, in charge of the party making the observations from the great dome of the Observatory, laughed heartily at the idea.

"I'm afraid that the effect of our work tonight upon winning the war is extremely minute. However, we have had a very good opportunity to correct our astronomical maps."

As Accurately As Possible.

The four points of contact of the shadow of the moon were taken as accurately as possible by the several parties we have sent out in the path of the eclipse. The moment the shadow of the moon encroaches upon the very outer rim of the sun, it is taken. Then there is the moment when the moon shadow touches the other side of the rim. Finally, when the moon passes entirely beyond the sun, and recedes into space. This data compared with those taken at other points, is expected to rectify the position of the sun and moon on the maps.

The men in the party conducting the observations were J. S. Hammond, astronomer in charge, assistants C. C. Wylie and W. A. Conrad, of the Naval Observatory, and Prof. L. G. Hoxton, of the University of Virginia. Thousands of people in Washington suffered blurred eyes, as they attempted to view the great shadow that swept across the country diagonally from the State of Washington to Florida.

Visible 6:33 to 7:29.

It was visible from 6:33 to 7:29 viewed from Washington and near this city. Besides the many people, professional and otherwise, who stared at the heavens in the streets, there were many moving picture men, who, for the first time in the history of the profession, had an opportunity to photograph such a remarkable phenomena.

Some of the cities and towns that were in the shadow path to which parties were sent to make observations were Baker City, Ore.; Pocatello, Idaho; Denver, Col.; Dodge City, Kan.; Guthrie, Okla.; Hampton and Warren, Ark.; Yazoo City and Jackson, Miss.; Monroeville and Brewerton, Ala.; The Dalles, Wash.; Cedar Keys and Orlando, Fla.

Many Observations.

Congressman Aswell, of Louisiana, was an interested member of the party at the Observatory.

Under the appropriation of $500 by Congress, the Naval Observatory undertook observations of the eclipse and equipped the station. The site where the most interesting observations were made were in Baker City, Ore. Here the shadow was total and had the very interesting magnetic phenomena of the corona, a halo of brilliantly colored streamers. What effect this corona has on radio communication was studied by the scientists.

"It is my opinion," said Astronomer Hammond, "that the phenomena precedes electrical disturbances in the North, another Aurora Borealis."

COTTON PRICES FIXED ON TENTATIVE BASIS

War Industries Board Reaches Agreement with Manufacturers.

After conference with the cotton manufacturers, the Price Fixing Committee of the War Industries Board yesterday announced a tentative plan to be operative if the pending negotiations for price agreement are concluded. The prospective prices are:

On all bona fide sales made by June 5 for delivery previous to January 1, prices to remain as shown in sales. On all sales made after June 5 for delivery subsequent to September 30, the prices are to be subject to revision to accord with the prices agreed upon by the Price Fixing Committee of the War Industries Board in conference with the War Service Committee of the National Council of the American Cotton Manufacturers.

On all sales made for delivery after January 1 the prices agreed upon by the Price Fixing Committee in conference with the manufacturers are to be the prices, regardless of the fact that the sales may have been made previous to June 5.

The Important Job of Rearing Children.

A writer in the Woman's Home Companion says:

"We are none of us very certain in our hearts that what we do in our offices is really worth while. Our shoe store fails—what of it? There are a thousand shoe stores. Our factory burns down—a temporary inconvenience, but in twenty-four hours the world has adjusted itself and gone on. Alexander conquered the world, and his ashes were hardly cold before the kingdom that he built up began to crumble. Nothing that we do in business or politics is of very much importance a hundred years after. But one thing we do of whose eternal importance we can be absolutely sure: We raise children."

"We can make them sons of God, or we can let them go to the devil. And according as we make them, they make the children who come after them. The influence of a single life, good or bad, may extend itself down through the ages into eternity. 'I have watched progress being made in business and politics for a good many years. And I have noticed that the folks who make it are those that have come out of the best homes, where the mother is honored above every other person in the world, and where the father looks on his business as being merely a necessary adjunct to his home.'"
